

Children should choose jobs that are similar to their parents' job than to choose jobs that are very different from their parents' jobs.

There is no doubt that a job is the backbone of everybody's life without that people would be deprived of a great foundation of an appropriate lifestyle either mentally or physically. However, whether people should choose their jobs according to their parents' jobs or not has turned into a hectic phenomenon recently. Despite the popular belief about choosing children's jobs completely different from their parents' job, I wholeheartedly hold the belief that offspring should choose their careers according to their parents' career in order to guarantee the highest possible level of success for them. In the following essay, I will try to shed more light on my vantage point by providing some conspicuous reasons and ample examples.

To begin with, opting for jobs according to the parents' jobs by children is, from an objective perspective, the promising opportunity and unique way to be more likely to become successful because of the same genetic fundaments. For one thing, when it comes to choosing an appropriate field either educationally or practically by children, common grounds either physically or intellectually between children and their parents should be taken into account in order to guarantee the highest possible level of the abilities for them. This fact (the offspring genetic similarities to their parents) makes them more vigorous and fully-potential to be more enthusiastic and much more confident in their life. For another, when children follow their parents' footsteps to have an ideal job, it could be either explicitly or implicitly affected their profiting amount of EQ (emotional quite). Since they have risen in the same circumstances, same breeding ground, or same environment, they would be fortunated of the same amount of EQ or IQ portion which leads them to the same roots of their job opportunities. Furthermore, generally speaking, in order to be more successful and victorious in life road, a long bumpy road, there is no way but to use and take the previous lessons and faults of parents' experiences which show children clearly how would they choose their steps aright. However, lucky us, the compass of merits of choosing jobs similar to parents by children is far beyond just genetic benefits.

Another indispensable charm of electing the same type of parents' job by offspring is the fact that there would be countless educational advantages on it because of the same abilities and essences among them. For one thing, there would be a great source of knowledge which dramatically affects positively on children's job life. On the bright side, all the worthwhile learning could be used to be more skillful, and on the dark side, children can take lessons from the parents' faults to be more stable and far from the possible failures. For another, children who have the same job situations by their parents, have already been equipped with very beneficial knowledge about this job. Therefore, children should course less distance to achieve success than other children in different situations with them. Furthermore, at this progressive day of the modern technological era, we are in the dawn of exchanging experiences through whole people thanks to the presence of the internet and social media, and dusk of living lonely without earning any other's experiences like primitive ones with no tools except fire! Furthermore, choosing the same career or job with a parent, not only does help offspring to keep their hand in the expert of their hired skill but also it can keep children far from being a disappointed person who has no ultimate goal like the jack of all trades, master of none people!

Following the previous contents, there are numerous emotional benefits thanks to selecting the same career with our parents. For one thing, this action can have some influential effects on our behavior and self-confidence which leads us dramatically to boost our abilities to touch the moon. From an objective perspective, children who choose their job according to their parents' jobs have a remarkable amount of confidence and comfortable feeling. There is vivid independence feeling through them because of relying on their parents' jobs. For another, in any critical circumstances, they would be sure to pass this jeopardize and deathblow state by the least amount of casualties. Furthermore, these kinds of gratification among the young population about the same job with their parents keep them to create one more alight generation to catch their specific brilliant horizons and would be much more conscious to establish their utopia in the long run.

All things considered, not only does choose the same job with parents to help offspring to be more and more likely to succeed, but also children can learn many worthwhile and unique experiences which have already been ready for them, and also they can boost their ego to get more passionate benefits. Having enough amount of useful information, being more likely to win, and having enough amount of eagerness and passion have shaped by choosing jobs according to parents' jobs by children. Thus I firmly contend that choosing the same kind of jobs with parents' jobs by children could be considered as a "must" rather than an option.
